

@FINANCIAL AGREEMENT

- What's mine is mine, what's yours is yours.
- Anything I give you or your family whilst we are together I give freely and you do the same in return.
- Anything I do for you or your family whilst we are together I do willingly and expect nothing in return, and you do the same.
- I make no contribution to your asset base or your superannuation, so I won't seek to keep any of that if we should separate, you do the same in return.
- Any assets we purchase together need to be done on a 50/50 basis, in establishment and contribution.
- If this changes the assets we came into this relationship with, we will draw up a new agreement at that time to reflect the change.
- Whilst we are living together, we will pay our own way in terms of expenses and living costs – this may be by way of written agreement over time to reflect the variation in living arrangements, locations, home ownership, etc (emails will suffice).
- Should we separate in the future, any jointly owned assets will need to be agreed in value, or independently valued. Either party may choose to buy the other out, but if agreement cannot be reached any assets will be sold by agreement or at Auction if no agreement reached and any offer within 10% of the agreed value will be accepted. All costs and disbursements will be met before the division of the asset pool is completed.
- No matter what behaviour on either party creates the catalyst for separation, we acknowledge that no emotional wound will be soothed by seeking to financially hurt the other. Therefore we both agree that we will never break the intention of this agreement by taking legal action against the other party should a separation happen at some point in the future.
- Our respective 'Last Will and Testament' will state the beneficiaries of our Estate and we agree not to 'challenge' the Estate of the other in the event of death.
- If we so choose, we will take mutual Life Insurance or other such policies for the benefit of the other if this is deemed necessary. This may be necessary to be negotiated around the purchase of joint assets.
- We make this agreement freely in full knowledge, awareness, care, concern and love for the other.
